HISTORY OF THE GRANITE INN

546 Main Street, located in the national historic district of Rockland, Maine, began in 1833 as a Federal Colonial house built of gray granite quarried nearby in St. George. Local craftsmen fashioned the beautiful structure that still stands today. The house was built for Capt. Robert Perry, a “well-known mariner.”

In 1906, the Elks Club purchased the building for their clubhouse, adding the large wooden wing to the rear. The building was heavily damaged by fire in the 1940's. The terrazzo floors and woodwork date from the building's restoration.

In 1984, through renovation and restoration, the property was converted into the lovely, comfortable Granite Inn, formerly known as The Old Granite Inn.

The current owners/innkeepers have been greeting guests from around the world since their purchase of the property in 2006.

DOWNTOWN ROCKLAND MAINE

True to its name, the Granite Inn is distinguished by its granite façade and expansive porch. Situated across from the ferry terminal and Knights Marina, guests can get an unobstructed view of the active harbor with lobster boats, windjammers and docks. And Rockland has become a fast-growing community for tourists.

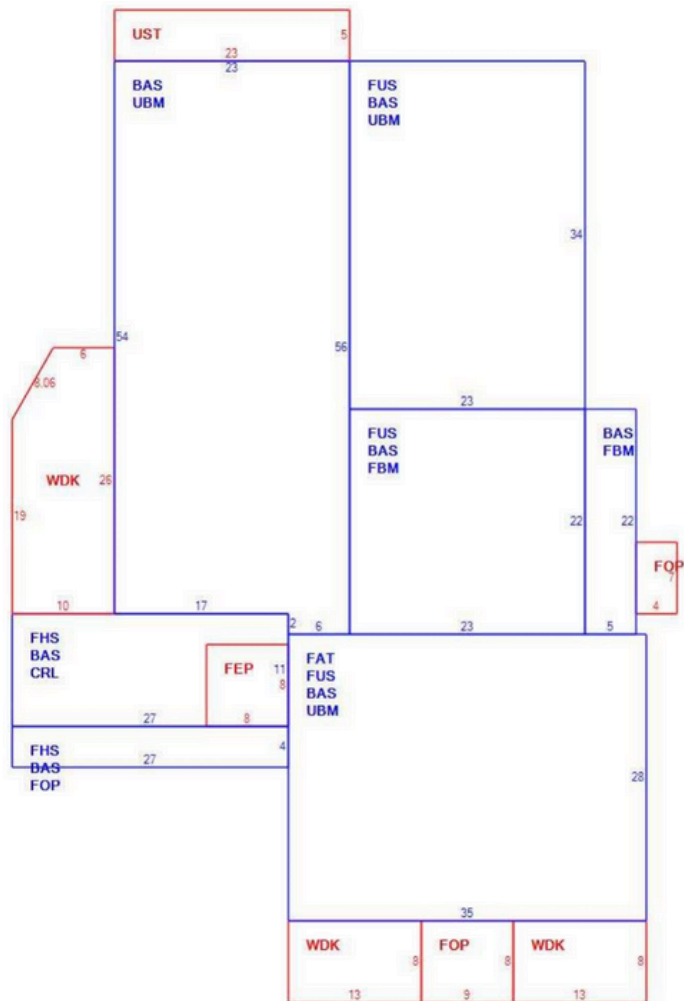

With many new restaurants, shops, museums, galleries and the famous Strand Theatre, along with the thriving waterfront, Rockland is a popular stop for travelers exploring the southern/midcoast shores of Maine.

Rockland is located on the western shore of Penobscot Bay, a large and picturesque bay in the Gulf of Maine. This gives it a significant maritime character, with a working harbor and access to numerous islands. It's a key city within the Midcoast region, an area known for its scenic coastline, historic towns, and artistic communities. It also serves as a departure point for the Maine State Ferry Service, providing access to islands like Vinalhaven, North Haven, and Matinicus. In essence, Rockland's location on Penobscot Bay makes it a gateway to the islands and a focal point for coastal activities, while its position within Midcoast Maine provides access to a rich blend of cultural and natural attractions.

OWNER'S QUARTERS

There is substantial private space for the owners of Granite Inn.

The owners put a two story addition onto the 1700s end of the house, adding a first floor living room with a second story with vaulted ceilings, incredible natural light and a wonderful view of Rockland's bustling working harbor. This space is accessible from the exterior private front porch, as well as from the kitchen or office/reception area.

Off the inn's private kitchen is access to the owner's bedroom with ensuite bath. There is a small outdoor deck accessible from the owner's living room.

There is a 3rd floor space upstairs from the 2nd story vaulted space (photo at right) that could be refinished to add another private owner's room or staff room.

There are options at The Granite Inn!
